

Ally Martinez

Ally Martinez serves as the Family Engagement Specialist at Cornerstone Craftsman. She is currently pursuing a master's degree in Forensic Psychology at George Washington University, after graduating Magna Cum Laude with departmental honors in Psychology from University of Richmond. Fluent in English and Spanish, Ally brings both cultural insight and research-based knowledge to her role.

Ally's academic training has sharpened her interest in how family and community support systems influence youth outcomes, particularly in settings connected to education and justice. In her previous experience, she worked directly with young learners in under-resourced educational environments, led behavioral research teams, and built communication strategies that fostered engagement and trust.

At Cornerstone Craftsman, Ally's passion lies in bridging relationships between pre-apprentices, their families, schools, and community partners. She is particularly focused on ensuring that every youth has the support and advocacy needed to succeed in their vocational journey and beyond.
